WHAT IS COMMUNICATION?

1. Communication is an exchange of facts, ideas, opinions or emotions by two or more persons (W.H. Norman & Summer)
 2. Communication is common understanding through communion of minds and hearts.
 3. The English word 'communication' is derived from a Latin word "communis" which means 'common'.
 4. Communication is the sharing of information
 5. Communication is the giving and receiving of messages
 6. Communication is the transfer of information from one or more people to one or more other people.

Communication requires a sender, a message, and an intended recipient, although the receiver need not be present or aware of the sender's intent to communicate at the time of communication; thus communication can occur across vast distances in time and space.

Communication requires that the communicating parties share an area of communicative commonality. The communication process is complete once the receiver has understood the message.

CATEGORIES OF COMMUNICATION

The different categories of communication are:

- Spoken or Verbal Communication: face-to-face, telephone, radio or television and other media.

- Non-Verbal Communication: body language, gestures, how we dress or act.

- Written Communication: letters, e-mails, books, magazines, the Internet or via other media.

- Visualizations: graphs and charts, maps, logos and other visualizations can communicate messages.

Context

- Context - Communication is affected by the context in which it takes place. This context may be physical, social, chronological or cultural. Every communication proceeds with context. The sender chooses the message to communicate within a context.

EFFECTIVE COMMUNICATION

- Note: The terms 'Communication' and 'effective communication' are distinctly different. One can communicate without effectively communicating the message. The main goal of communication is to ensure that there is effective communication.

OBJECTIVES OF COMMUNICATIONS

- We always have an objective when communicating. Effective communication will also enable you to:
- Get the job you want
- Boost your chances for promotion
- Help others get things done
- Benefit your business
- Improve your grades,
- Advance socially
- Ensure a bright future
- Enhance other skills
- Helping others get ahead

CONCLUSION

- Being able to communicate effectively is the most important of all life skills. Communication is simply the act of transferring information from one place to another.
- This may be vocally (using voice), written (using printed or digital media such as books, magazines, websites or emails), visually (using logos, maps, charts or graphs) or non-verbally (using body language, gestures and the tone and pitch of voice).
- How well this information is transmitted and received is a measure of whether your communication skills are good.
