

Skills that support effective listening

DR.SUZAN MOHAMED

LECTURE (5)

B- Skills that support effective listening:

- Active listening

- Most important yet most difficult
- Demonstrating that you are actively listening
 - * Eye contact
 - * Lean forward facing client/patient
 - * “Yes, I understand – please continue”
- Helping the client/patient to be relevant
- Interrupt at appropriate point & try to redirect the interview

- E.g. what you just told me about your job is very interesting, but I would like to hear more about the headache you have been having.

- You must read between the lines. Pick up the underlying meaning of the message (intent); don't rely entirely upon the obvious or superficial meaning (content) but pick up the nonverbal cues.

- Facial expressions (smile, frown, blank look, grimace).
- Gestures/mannerisms (fidgeting, toe tapping, clenched fists).
- Eye behaviors (avoiding eye contact, staring, wide eyes).
- Posture (erect, leaning toward/away from someone).

Reflecting.

- Repeating the client's message Verbal or nonverbal
- Reflecting content repeats client's statement, May be misused or overused
- Reflecting feelings
- Verbalizing implied feelings in client's comment
- Encourages clients to clarify

Acknowledging.

- Showing a response to what you are noticing or hearing.
- For example: 'I can see you are very upset about this.'

Summarizing.

- - Never be afraid to summarize what the client/patient has told you
- - Summarize & Check accuracy
- e.g. “I would like to make sure that I have been understanding you correctly, you told me that
- “What I hear from you is that ... Did I get that right?”
- - Highlighting the main ideas expressed
- - Conveys understanding
- - Review’s main themes of conversation
- - Use at different times during interaction

Summarizin

Empathizing.

- - Empathy means putting yourself in another person's place
- - Empathy is neither sympathy (feeling sorry for another person) nor compassion (that quality of love or tenderness that causes one person to suffer along with another).

Empathizing.

- Respond to the client/patients' emotional questions and tell the client/patient everything about his/her case even if he/she does not ask
- - Saying something to show you appreciate (not sympathize) how the other person seems to be feeling.
- For example: 'Everything has happened so fast, no wonder you are finding it difficult to take in.'

Paraphrasing.

- Put the focus of the paraphrase on what the other person implied, not on what you wanted him/her to imply, e.g., don't say, "I believe what you meant to say was ...". Instead, say "If I'm hearing you right, you conveyed that ...?"

C- Skills that help with giving information

C- Skills that help with giving information

- Checking what information, the person knows already.
- Giving small amounts of information at a time, using clear terms and avoiding jargon.
- Avoiding detail unless it is requested – do not assume people want to know.

- Checking understanding using an open question.

For example: ‘I have gone through some difficult information, what sense have you made of it?’

- Pausing and waiting for a response to what you have said before moving on.
- Checking, with sensitivity, the effect of the information you have given on the client

For example: ‘There has been a lot of information to take in today, how are you feeling?’
